

DG- CSIR awarded INSA's "The JAGADIS CHANDRA BOSE MEDAL (2007)"

The Jagadis Chandra Bose Medal was established in 1976 by the Indian National Science Academy (INSA), New Delhi. It is awarded once in three years for outstanding contributions in Biochemistry, Biophysics, Molecular Biology and related areas of which impact has been felt for a considerable length of time.

The medal for the year 2007 has been awarded to Prof. Samir K. Brahmachari, Director-General, Council of Scientific and Industrial Research, New Delhi, for establishing leadership in functional genomics effectively integrating experimental and computational approaches.

The Award was presented after the Award-lecture on January 11, 2009 at INSA, New Delhi.