CSIR INVITES INDUSTRIES To Embark on a Technology Leadership Mission

The New Millennium Indian Technology Leadership Initiative (NMITLI) envisages a symbiotic promotion and fostering of Public-Private Partnership (PPP) in a Team - India spirit to enable Indian Industries to attain global leadership position in a few selected niche areas. The programme is backed by national determination to turn sound technological ideas into a reality through a systematic development of innovative projects. Over the last six years, CSIR has evolved 50 projects of which 11 have been successfully completed. These projects involve over 71 industry partners and 250 R&D Institutions of India with an estimated outlay of about Rs. 400 crores.

The Invitation

Conceptual proposals in about 3-4 pages are invited from the industries. The project proposal should brief about the expertise available, the likely impact of the proposal, the global scenario, novelty element, leadership possibilities and expertise required with R&D institutions for networking, estimates of cost and time for the project, product/technology commercialization plan and partnership sought from Indian R&D institutions/academia to form Team India. Proforma for the application could be downloaded from CSIR website: www.csir.res.in
